My Dog is Missing

Investigative journalist James Scott tells his own story about how he suffered at the hands of canine kidnappers.

Having reached a certain age, I thought I could safely believe that I had had most of the negative experiences that life can dish up. However, just recently I had a traumatic experience which I had never taken into consideration as an option.

I arrived home from work one evening and found that a trip to the supermarket was in order. So, as usual, I whistled to my little four-legged companion, put her lead on and set out. (1) _____ On entering the supermarket, I popped the few things I needed into a basket and went quickly to the checkout which was quiet for a change. (2) _____

When I looked for my faithful friend, I was confused. I blamed the twilight and my failing eyesight at first, but, as I got closer, I saw that she was well and truly gone. I flew into a total panic and started running down the road. I had this crazy idea that one of my neighbours, who all knew the dog well, had passed by and for some reason decided to take her home with them. (3) _____ Slowly the neighbours emerged and let me know in no uncertain terms that they wouldn't even consider doing such a stupid thing.

I just stood there, unable to believe what had happened. I knew I had tied her securely using a double knot. There was no doubt about it, someone had stolen my dog. It was unbelievable. She wasn't some kind of fancy pedigree but was a wonderful little mixture of breeds. A real Heinz 57 varieties. I just couldn't think of what to do. I was in total shock.

(4) _____ Over the next few days, they made and pasted posters all over the neighbourhood, contacted radio stations to make announcements and placed advertisements in various newspapers.

A few days later I had to go away on a five-day business trip. (5) _____ Nevertheless, on my return, when I opened my apartment door the first thing I saw was one of the posters lying on the hall table. I felt as if someone had just thrown a bucket of cold water over me. That's when I decided that I would just have to try and forget what had happened and get on with my life.

(6) _____ It didn't make me feel too optimistic, as there had been many such calls. Early the next morning, I called the woman and she gave me her address, which was on the other side of the city. On the way there I refused to let myself become excited. You can imagine my joy when I arrived and saw that it was in fact my faithful little friend that had been found.

(7) _____ My dog had some health problems from her days on the streets, which a few visits to the vet put right. All in all, it took her about two months to become her old rascally self again. You can also bet your life that these days she doesn't spend any time tied up outside retail outlets.

You are going to read an extract from a novel. For questions 8-15 choose the answer (A, B, C, or D) which you think fits best according to the text.

The train pulled in to a small wayside station and we all descended. Outside, beyond the low white fence, a wagonette drawn by a pair of horses was waiting. Our coming was evidently a great event, as the station-master and porters gathered round us to carry our luggage out. It was a sweet, simple country spot, but I was surprised to observe that by the gate there stood two men in dark uniforms, who leaned upon their short rifles and glanced keenly at us as we passed. The coachman, a hard-faced little fellow saluted Sir Henry Baskerville, and in a few minutes we were flying swiftly down a broad white road. Rolling pasture lands curved upwards on either side of us, and old gabled houses could be seen among the thick green foliage, but behind the peaceful and sunlit countryside there rose ever, dark against the evening sky, the curve of the moors broken by the jagged and sinister hills.

The wagonette swung round into a side road, and we curved upwards through deep lanes worn by centuries of wheels, high banks on either side, heavy with thick growth. Various bushes gleamed in the light of the sinking sun. Still steadily rising, we passed over a narrow granite bridge, and alongside a noisy stream which gushed swiftly down, foaming and roaring. Both road and stream wound up through a valley dense with scrub oak and fir trees. At every turning Baskerville gave an exclamation of delight, looking eagerly about and asking countless questions. To his eyes all seemed beautiful, but to me an air of melancholy lay upon the countryside, which clearly revealed the mark of the dying year. Yellow leaves carpeted the lanes and fluttered down upon us as we passed. The rattle of our wheels died away as we drove through drifts of rotting vegetation - sad gifts, as it seemed to me, for Nature to throw before the carriage of the returning heir of the Baskervilles.

"Halloa!" cried Dr Mortimer.

On the summit, hard and clear like a statue was an officer sitting tall on his horse, dark and stern, his rifle poised ready over his forearm. He was watching the road along which we travelled.

"What is this, Perkins?" exclaimed Dr Mortimer.

Our driver half turned in his seat.

"There's a convict escaped from Prince Town, sir," said the driver. "He's been out three days now, and the warders watch every road and every station, but they've had no sight of him yet. You can imagine how excited the farmers around here are, sir!"

"Well, I understand that they get five pounds if they can give information," said Dr Mortimer.

"Yes, sir, but the chance of five pounds is but a poor thing compared to the chance of having their throat cut. You see, he isn't like any ordinary convict. This is a man that would stick at nothing."

"Who is he, then?" demanded Dr Mortimer.

"It is Selden, the Notting Hill murderer."

I remembered the case well, for it was one in which Holmes had taken an interest on account of the peculiar ferocity of the crime and the brutality which had marked all the actions of the assassin. The changing of his death sentence to one of life imprisonment had been due to some doubts as to his complete sanity, so atrocious was his conduct.

Our wagonette had topped a rise and in front of us rose the huge expanse of the moor. A cold wind swept down from it and set us shivering. Somewhere there, on that cold plain, was this dangerous man hiding in a burrow like a wild beast, his heart full of hatred against a society which had cast him out. It needed but this to complete the grim appearance of the barren waste, the chilling wind and the darkening sky. Even Baskerville fell silent and pulled his overcoat more closely around him.
