PART ONE – READING COMPREHENSION

You are going to read an extract from a novel. For questions 1-8, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which you think fits best according to the text.

'Afternoon, Mattie!' Mr Eckler called from the bow of his boat. 'Got a new one. Brand-new. Just come in. By a Mrs Wharton. House of Mirth, it's called. I tucked it in behind the coffee beans, under W. You'll see it.'

'Thank you, Mr Eckler!' I said, excited at the prospect of a new book. 'Did you read it?'

'Yup. Read it whole!'

'What's it about?'

'Can't hardly say. Some flighty city girl. Don't know why it's called House of Mirth. It ain't funny in the least.'

The Fulton Chain Floating Library is only a tiny room, closet really, below decks in Charlie Eckler's pickle boat. It is nothing like the proper library they have in Old Forge, but it has its own element of surprise. Mr Eckler uses the room to store his wares, and when he finally gets around to moving a chest of tea or a sack of cornmeal, you never know what you might find. And once in a while, the main library in Herkimer sends up a new book or two. It's nice to get your hands on a new book before everyone else does. While the pages are still clean and white and the spine hasn't been snapped.

I stepped on to the boat and went below decks. The House of Mirth was under W, like Mr Eckler said it would be, only it was wedged next to Mrs Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch. Mr Eckler sometimes gets authors and titles confused. I signed out in a ledger he kept on top of a molasses barrel, then rooted around behind a crate of eggs, a jar of marbles and a box of dried dates but found nothing I hadn't already read. I remembered to get the bag of cornmeal we needed. I wished I could buy oatmeal or white flour instead, but cornmeal cost less and went further. I was to get a ten-pound bag. The fifty-pound bag cost more to buy but was cheaper per pound and I'd told Pa so, but he said only rich people can afford to be thrifty.

Just as I was about to climb back upstairs, something caught my eye – a box of composition books. Real pretty ones with hard covers on them, and swirly paint designs, and a ribbon to mark your place. I put the cornmeal down, and Mrs Wharton too, and picked one up. Its pages were smooth and white. I thought it would be a fine thing to write on paper that nice. The pages in my old composition book were rough and had blurry blue lines printed on them, and were made with so little care that there were slivers of wood visible in them.

I handed Mr Eckler fifty cents of my father's money for the cornmeal. 'How much is this?' I asked, holding up one of the pretty composition books. I had sixty cents from all the fiddleheads Weaver and I had sold to the Eagle Bay Hotel. It was money I knew I should have given to my Pa. I'd meant to, really. I just hadn't gotten around to it.

'Those notebooks? They're expensive, Mattie. Italians made them. I've got to get forty-five cents apiece,' he said. 'I've got some others coming in for fifteen cents in a week or so if you can wait.'

Forty-five cents was a good deal of money, but I didn't want the ones for fifteen cents, not after I'd seen the others. I had ideas. Tons of them. For stories and poems. I chewed the inside of my cheek, deliberating. I knew I would have to write a lot when I went to Barnard College – if I went to Barnard College – and it might be a good idea to get a head start. Weaver had said I should be using my words, not just collecting them, and I knew they would just glide across this beautiful paper, and when I was done writing them, I could close them safely inside the covers. Just like a real book. Guilt gnawed at my insides. I took the money from my pocket and gave it to Mr Eckler quickly, so the thing was done and I couldn't change my mind. Then I watched breathlessly as he wrapped my purchase in brown paper and tied it with string. I thanked him as he handed me the package, but he didn't hear me because Mr Pulling, the station-master, was asking him the price of oranges.

You are going to read an article about people's attitudes to inventions. The headings of the paragraphs have been removed. For the paragraphs 9-15, choose from the headings A-D the one which fits best.

Inventions: The Top Ten?

9 _____

Inventions have been around for as long as we have. Some have had a dramatic impact on the world we live in and on our way of life; others have simply made life little bit easier. Most have influenced our lives in a positive way, but some, it has to be said, have been anything but beneficial.

10 _____

According to a recent survey carried out by a British radio station into what their listeners' ten favourite and ten least favourite inventions were, the bicycle came top of the favourites list, though it was felt that voting had been unfairly influenced by members of a cycling organisation. Radio, perhaps not surprisingly, came out second top of the list of favourite inventions, followed closely by the computer.

11 _____

Heading the list of least favourite inventions were atomic and nuclear weapons, with landmines coming in at second place and the humble plastic bag coming third. Other inventions which featured in this dislike list were mobile phones, car alarms and speed cameras. The internal combustion engine entered both lists but was more disliked than liked.

12 _____

Another survey carried out by the Fuji Research Institute in Japan, in which 2,000 adults in the Tokyo region were asked to rate the ten greatest inventions of the twentieth century, placed instant noodles, an 'invention' from 1958, at the top of their list. Instant noodles have been commercially produced since 1971 with almost fifty billion cups now consumed worldwide each year.

Nonetheless, it seems astounding that in the country which is a world leader in technology a food product should be voted ahead of personal stereos, video games, CDs and cameras, which came third, fourth, fifth and sixth. Also interesting is the fact that the motor car was not ranked at all, possibly because it was invented overseas. Incidentally, karaoke was in second place.

14 _____

The question 'What's the most important invention in the past 2,000 years?' was also presented to a gathering of Nobel prize winners and other serious thinkers recently. Although there was some disagreement as to what constituted an invention, there were a couple of clear winners. The printing press was chosen above any other invention. Johannes Gutenberg's invention of movable type in the fifteenth century had a huge impact on the spread of information, with his amazing invention allowing every family to afford books and learn to read.

Disagreement over what is the most important or the best or worst invention only goes to prove that it is a matter of personal choice and perspective. One man's meat is another man's poison. The classic example is nuclear power. A cheap and 'clean' source of power in the conventional sense, it also has drawbacks: in the wrong hands it could be responsible for wiping out the world as we know it. The combustion engine is the same. Environmentalists would say that it is responsible for more deaths and pollution than any other invention in the last 1,000 years and wish that it had never been invented. But many of us would overlook this for the simple fact that we wouldn't want to live without our cars.
